2018 Schoemaker-Sustainalytics Business and Human Rights Student Competition

Are you passionate about sustainability? Do you have an original idea for a paper that could contribute to the field of business and human rights? If so, describe your topic in 500 words and you may win an opportunity to conduct research into your topic and further your knowledge of corporate social responsibility (CSR) through an internship with Sustainalytics.

Sustainalytics and the NJCM announce the 3rd edition of the Schoemaker-Sustainalytics Student Competition Business and Human Rights. This competition was launched in 2014 as a tribute to late Daan Schoemaker. Schoemaker was a human rights expert with Sustainalytics from 2009 until 2012. He joined the board of the Dutch section of the International Commission of Jurists (NJCM) in 2009, and became Vice Chair in 2010. This award was established to create opportunities for motivated students interested in pursuing a career in business and human rights.

The previous winners of the Competition, Remco Slim and Livia Wyss were awarded with a 4 month internship at Sustainalytics to study business and human rights-related topics. Slim studied cases from different jurisdictions to assess how corporations can cope with the increasing uncertainty regarding their legal accountability on business and human rights issues in a fragmented judicial system. Wyss explored ways in her research to provide victims of corporate human rights violations access to remedies through an international arbitration tribunal to close the accountability gap.

On his experience with the Student Competition, Slim says:

'Gaining insights from enthusiastic human rights experts who want to make the world a better place: that is what the internship at Sustainalytics in cooperation with the NJCM has brought me. During my internship I gained a lot of experience which enriched my studies and formed me for the future.'

REQUIREMENTS

1. Participation is open to all current students of a master's level university education, of which at least a component was completed in the Netherlands. Furthermore, applicants must be registered as a student at an EU educational institution for the duration of the internship.
2. Participants are expected to be both aware of, and in agreement with, the eligibility requirements in this regulation.

3. Students who fulfil the criteria under (1) may submit a proposal for an essay in the area of Business & Human Rights. The proposal must:

- Be written in English;
- Be no longer than 500 words;
- Outline the main topic of the essay, its relevance for the field of business & human rights, and the proposed research methods.

4. All submissions should be accompanied by proof of registration at an EU educational institution, a curriculum vitae and the name and contact details of an academic reference. Submissions must be sent in digital format, no later than February 19, 2018. Submissions received after this date will not be considered.

5. Once selected, the essay on the winning proposal, must:

- Be written in English;
- Be between 4,000 and 6,000 words in length;
- Be completed during the internship with Sustainalytics;
- Address the topic of business and human rights
(the topic does not need to be directly applicable for Sustainalytics, but may also have broader societal or scientific relevance).

PROCEDURE

6. The NJCM will acknowledge receipt of the essay proposals specified under (3) within fourteen working days of receipt.

7. A pre-selection of proposals will be made, based on whether these satisfy criteria under (1), (3) and (4) above. If more than ten proposals are submitted that satisfy these criteria, the NJCM will make a shortlist of ten candidates on the basis of the following criteria:

- a. Originality of the research topic;
- b. Relevance for the area of business and human rights;
- c. Quality and academic level of the proposal;
- d. Degree of innovative insight.

8. A committee of three to five experts from the NJCM's membership base, including one representative from Sustainalytics, will assess the proposals that were shortlisted under (7), using the criteria specified under (7). The committee will present the top three proposals to Sustainalytics for a last assessment round. The top three candidates will receive notification by March 12, 2018.

9. The three candidates shortlisted under (8) will be invited to present their proposals to a Sustainalytics selection committee in the period of 13-31 March 2018. In addition to the criteria named under (7), a subjective assessment of the candidates' motivation, skills, and passion for sustainability and human rights will form part of the assessment. References may be contacted at this stage.

10. In the case of participation of a relative of one of the members of the committees of readers from either the NJCM or Sustainalytics, this member will be replaced by a reserve member. In the case of a (former) student who is supervised by one of the members of the commission of readers, this member shall likewise be replaced by a reserve-member.

11. In the case of unforeseen situations not covered by this regulation, the chairman of the committee of readers from Sustainalytics, as specified under (9) will pronounce a decision.

12. Sustainalytics will select a winning candidate by April 1, 2018, and will communicate this selection to all applicants.

PRIZE

13. The prize will be an internship placement with Sustainalytics in Amsterdam, for a three to four-month period for four or five working days a week. The internship will commence no later than Monday July 2nd 2018, for a duration and on a date to be mutually agreed upon by Sustainalytics and the winning candidate. During the internship, the winning candidate will be involved in Sustainalytics' activities in the area of ESG (environment, social & governance) research, with a focus on the area of business and human rights. There will also be allocated time to work on the essay as indicated under (4).

14. Interns will receive a stipend in accordance with the regulations of the applicable Sustainalytics office; this consists of EUR 450 per month on a full time basis and full reimbursement of commuting expenses.

15. Depending on the quality and innovativeness of the essay, Sustainalytics and the NJCM will determine whether there are possibilities for publication through their respective networks.
